Florida's Law on Hazing: The Chad Meredith Act

Chad Meredith's Story

- In 2001, University of Miami student Chad Meredith returned from a concert and began drinking with two officers of Kappa Sigma, a fraternity he wished to join. After several hours of drinking, the group tried to swim across Lake Osceola near campus. Meredith had a blood alcohol level of 0.13. He drowned 34 feet from shore in six feet nine inches of water. Although, the fraternity officers protested that the incident was not a fraternity-sanctioned hazing event, a jury found otherwise, and awarded the deceased student's family a $12.6 million verdict in a negligence suit based on hazing.

Hazing Policy as Stated in the FSU Student Conduct Code

According to FSU Student Conduct Code

- Hazing is defined as any group or individual action or activity that endangers the mental or physical health or safety or which may demean, disgrace, or degrade any person, regardless of location, intent, or consent of participant(s). Although hazing is generally related to a person's initiation or admission into, or affiliation with, any group or organization, it is not necessary that a person's initiation or continued membership is contingent upon participation in the activity, or that the activity was sanctioned or approved by the organization, for a charge of hazing to be upheld. The actions of active, associate, new, and/or prospective members of an organization may be considered hazing.

While definitions of hazing vary, some common factors include:

- Power differential between those in a group and those who want to join a group, or between senior and junior members of a group
- Involvement of intentional initiation rite, practice or 'tradition'

Note: Willingness to participate does not absolve either party of responsibility
